

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

ASSOCIATION HEADQUARTERS HONORED FOR EXCELLENCE IN COMMUNICATION

Leading Association Management Company Earns Two Communicator Awards in 2007 Print Competition

MOUNT LAUREL, NJ, JUNE 18, 2007 – Association Headquarters, Inc. (AH), a leader in association management, was recently honored with two prestigious awards in The Communicator Awards 2007 Print Competition. This highly-regarded, international awards competition recognizes outstanding work in the communication field, and honors professionals whose work serves as a benchmark for the industry.

AH proudly accepted an Award of Excellence in the brochure category for the 2007 American Transplant Congress campaign, and an Award of Distinction in the marketing/promotion category for the National Automotive Radiator Service Association's (NARSA) 55th Annual Convention and Tradeshow announcement.

Art Director Mark Denato, a member of the AH team since 2001, developed the themes for the award-winning pieces. His trendy take on the San Francisco skyline provided the basis for all collateral materials for the American Transplant Congress, including Denato's custom-cut Save the Date postcard shaped like the city, his unique Registration Brochure, and the eye-catching Call for Abstracts, created by Graphic Designer Anthony Mungiola.

For the NARSA 55th Annual Convention postcard, Denato captured the essence of the 1950's, the theme for the convention, by creating a postcard shaped like a classic car.

The Communicator's prestigious Award of Excellence is presented to those entrants whose ability to communicate makes them the best in their field. This year, only 10% of the entries were presented with this honor. The Award of Distinction recognizes projects that exceed industry standards in production or communication skills.

"This is great news for Association Headquarters, and we are incredibly proud of the accomplishments of our team," commented Bill MacMillan, Association Headquarters CEO. "This award reinforces our commitment to providing the highest quality work to our client partners."
