Association Headquarters Staff Recognized with Two Awards for Publication Excellence

MOUNT LAUREL, N.J. – The creative services division of Association Headquarters (AH), a leading association management company, has been recognized once again with two awards for publication and design excellence by the American Society of Business Publication Editors (ASBPE) and Writing That Works: The Business Communications Report.

The creative services department is responsible for the design, editorial, and publication management of several in house journals. The Cooling Journal, the official publication of NARSA – The International Heat Transfer Association, is one of them. The Cooling Journal was awarded the 2008 ASBPE Bronze Award for Editorial Excellence for the how-to-article “A simple repair leads to more money,” published in the November 2007 issue. Graphic designer Justin Fennelly, managing editor Sarah Cranston, and executive editor Mike Dwyer, CAE, were responsible for the content of the award-winning piece.

The APEX Awards for Publication Excellence is an annual international competition for professional communicators. The competition is sponsored by the editors of Writing That Works: The Business Communications Report and it recognizes excellence in graphic design, editorial content, and the ability to achieve overall communications excellence. AH was awarded the 2008 APEX Award for Publication Excellence for the 2006 annual report of the Juvenile Products Manufacturers Association. Art Director Mark Denato was responsible for creating the award-winning piece.

Denato and his graphic design team have won numerous awards for their eye-catching designs. In 2007 they received two Communicator Awards for Excellence and Distinction, two APEX Awards for Publication Excellence, and Gold and Silver Awards from Association TRENDS.

“We are extremely proud of our design and editorial team,” said Bob Waller, CAE, president of AH. “These awards are a true testament to the talent, creativity, and expertise of our staff.”
